

Press Release 13th of May, 2015

Makerbook – A hand-picked directory of the best free resources for creatives.

London based, senior art director Craig Barber has just launched a new side project called Makerbook.

Makerbook is a hand-picked directory of links to very best, free resources for creatives, designers, art directors and makers of digital products.

The site features a curated list of over 65 websites where you can easily download free, high quality stock photography, psd mockups, graphics, textures, stock video footage, icons, sound effects, fonts, music and colour swatches. All the types of things you, or your design and marketing teams need to create things like presentations, websites, apps, videos and any other type of creative project.

Craig put the site together for himself and for others who want to save themselves some time and money when it comes to quickly gathering free, high quality assets for their next project.

Craig will be adding new resources as when he comes across them and people can submit new ones by clicking on 'suggest a resource' link.
